Thomas Mervine, of Mt. Union is visiting Mr. Charles Mervine on West Pitt St.

Robert Prosser has gone back to State Nautical School, of Philadelphia.

Jere C. West is making improvements on his property, recently purchased from John Roberts.

Messrs. John Lewis and Corle McLaughlin are spending a few days with relatives in Reading.

Mr. Chester Ford, of Hopewell, transacted business in Bedford on Thursday.

Mr. C. F. Espenschade is attending a Sunday School convention in Saxton, Pa.

Miss Irma Eberfell, of Columbus, Ohio, spent a few days with her friend, Anna Espenschade.

Mr. Abraham Colebaugh of Osterburg was in Bedford on business last Tuesday.

Dr. H. R. Brightbill and Mr. George Shoemaker are finishing their residences with a coat of paint.

Enfield Dibert has accepted a position as Cornetist with an Altoona Orchestra.

Miss Emma Griest, who has been attending Juniata College has arrived home for her summer vacation.

Mr. D. S. Findley, of Schellburg, Rt. 1, was transacting business in Bedford last Monday.

Glen Longenecker, who is a student at Juniata College, Huntingdon, is home with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Longenecker.

Misses Helen Cuppett and Margaret Pepple of Hood College, Frederick, Md., are home with their parents at this place.

Miss Helen Corboy, who is a student at Shenandoah Valley College is home with her parents Mr. and Mrs. George Corboy.

The Democratic State Committee meets in Harrisburg on next Monday. All Democrats who can should attend.

Mr. Jacob Cogan was appointed borough policeman by the town council to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of S. F. Stiver. We think Mr. Cogan will make a fine policeman.

Earl Lawrence, who has accepted a position with Johnnie Jones Black and White Orchestra, York, Pa., left last Friday to assume his duties. He will play the Saxophone.

Mr. and Mrs. David Kloss, Mrs. S. E. Hedding, Miss Margaret Hedding, Miss Victoria Markley of Altoona and Mrs. Joel Carlton, Master Reed Carlton and Little Miss Josa Carlton of Roanoke, Va., spent Monday at the home of Miss Lizzie Bain on South Juliana St.

Mrs. R. E. Gamble, of Bedford, Rt. 5 visited the Gazette Office last Saturday and paid her subscription until 1923. Mrs. Gamble says her taxes in 1917 were $15 and a few cents, in 1922 they were $26. If this is the proportion of a raise in Bedford County no wonder the people are vigorously protesting.

YOUNG PEOPLE IN BAD AUTO WRECK

Three Are Seriously Injured as Big Touring Car Plunges Into Concrete Pier Near Claysburg Saturday Night.

Three persons were seriously injured and three others slightly hurt on Saturday night between 11 and 12 o'clock when a seven passenger Crawford touring car, ploughing through the darkness at a high rate of speed, veered from the road and struck one of the concrete abutments which marks the end of the state highway near the residence of Nelson Black, between Claysburg and Sprout. The machine was occupied by a party of young people from that section of Blair and Bedford counties and was returning to Claysburg when the accident occurred. All members of the party were thrown out by the terrific impact of the machine and the heavy abutment and all sustained injuries of a more or less serious nature.

The injured are: Leroy Fickes, 19, son of Merchant and Mrs. Harry Fickes of Sprout. In Nason hospital suffering from a bad fracture of both bones of the left leg midway between the ankle and knee; badly splintered bone and lacerations and contusions of the face and body.

Miss Kathryn Burket, daughter of Pastmaster and Mrs. Charles Burket of Claysburg, confined to home of parents by severe injuries of the back, a possible fracture of the skull and concussion of the brain. Extent of injuries not fully determined.

Miss Edith Shaffer of Everett, cousin of Miss Burket, confined to Burket home by injuries of the head, shock and painful bruises. Full extent of injuries not known, although believed to be serious.

Miss Bell Burket, sister of Kathryn, lacerations and contusions of the face and body. Not serious.

Emory Langham, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Langham of Queen. Several teeth knocked out and bad cuts and contusions of the head and body.

Theodore Claar, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Claar of Queen, driver of car, escaped with lacerations and abrasions of a painful but minor character.

FIRE AT ARLINGTON HOTEL

Last Tuesday evening about 9 o'clock the fire whistle gave a call for fire, an alarm having been sent in from the Arlington Hotel, owned by the Smith Sisters. It is thought a candle which was burning in a bed room fell over and set fire to the furnishings. The firemen responded quickly and the fire was soon extinguished but not until considerable damage was done to the room. The house was badly smoked.

David Potter

David Potter died at the home of his grandson, David Riddle in Pittsburgh on June 2nd, aged 83 years, 2 months and 2 days. Mr. Potter came to Osterburg after the Civil War from the State of Indiana, following his trade as miller for many years, and was here the greater part of his life. He was a Corporal in the 67th Indiana Regiment serving as a volunteer from 1861-1865 in the Civil War. He delighted in telling War Stories, which were interesting and instructive to all who heard him tell them. He was a faithful member of Trinity Reformed church at Osterburg. He is survived by two children, Mrs. Florence Riddle of Osterburg and Dr. George Potter, M. D. of St. Augustine, Fla. The funeral services were conducted at his late home on Monday with interment in the Reformed cemetery. Rev. John A. Borger conducted the services.

All members of K. of P. Lodge, V. 436 and all visiting Brothers are requested to be present at our next Lodge meeting, Monday evening, June 12, at 8 o'clock, business of importance to be transacted. Bro. H. O. Kline of Pittsburgh, will be present. Refreshments will be served and a good time is anticipated. Let there be a good turnout.

HARBAUGH-CLAYCOMB

On Saturday evening, June 3rd, Chas. V. Harbaugh and Miss Lela, daughter of Thomas Claycomb, both of Imler, R. D. Pa., were quietly married at the Reformed Parsonage at Osterburg by Rev. John A. Borger.

JOHN A. McSPARRAN SPEAKS AT WOODBURY

The Bedford County Pomona Grange will hold its next session at Woodbury, Thursday, June 15.

The forenoon session will begin at 10:30 and will be in the nature of a business session. In the afternoon at 1:30 Mrs. Clayton Smith will give a reading. This will be followed by an address from State Grange Master John A. McSparran. Then Mrs. N. F. Richards, Prof. Humphrey Dibert, Mrs. J. A. S. Beegle and E. B. Blackburn will discuss the subject, "The Grange as an Educational Factor". "Planning a Vacation" will be discussed by Mrs. W. F. Biddle, John Longenecker, Mrs. Roy Mowry and B. F. Beegle. The last number of the afternoon will be a reading by Mrs. Charles Koonitz.

In the evening at eight o'clock there will be a general discussion "Why Farmers Should Organize". This will be followed by a reading by Mrs. E. E. Brown. Then the Fifth Degree will be conferred in Full Form.

LARGE GRADUATING CLASS

Twenty-nine students were graduated Thursday evening of last week from Bedford High School. This was the largest class ever graduated in Bedford. ## CHAUTAUQUA morrow, Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Season tickets are on sale at Murdock's, Jacob's, the Banks, Cuppes, Reeds, and Dulls and by members of the ticket committee.

Buy your season ticket and save yourself money. Season tickets cost $2.00 while if you buy single admissions it costs you $5.00.

We want all persons that have not already seen a program to call at Dull's Drug Store and get one. The Committee has given the entertainments careful investigation and feels sure this years Chautauqua will prove the best we have ever had. The play "Friendly Enemies" would cost in New York the price of the entire season ticket of $2.00. No Tax this year. Last year our receipts were just a little short of expenses and we hope our Country friends as well as those in Bedford will take advantage of this high class entertainment and protect the Association financially by liberal patronage and this will insure a continuance of this fine and instructive entertainment.

Buy your Season ticket for $2.00 and $1.00.

WEDDING ANNOUNCEMENT

Mr. and Mrs. John Leonard announce the marriage of their daughter, Bernadette Ellen to Mr. Clarence Imgrund on Tuesday, June 20, at 8 o'clock in the morning. They will be at home at Cresson after July 1.

Baseball game this evening Coaldale vs Bedford.

RADIO AT CHAUTAUQUA TENT

Weather conditions permitting there will be a practical demonstration of radio at the Bedford Chautauqua which opens June 10. It is planned to display an elaborate receiving set on Chautauqua's fourth afternoon. It will be equipped with amplifier and magnavox, so that any messages allowed by "static conditions" can be transmitted clearly to persons in all parts of the chautauqua tent.

It is well known that the summer season is one of the most difficult times for the operation of radio. Nevertheless, the Redpath tent will be equipped with an aerial outfit, and if conditions prevent receiving communications from distant cities, the apparatus will be demonstrated by the transmission of messages locally.

Among the other unique features of this season's chautauqua are: Princess TeAta and her Indian friends; Alton Packard, cartoonist; and the Grosjean Marimba-Kylophone Company.

The elimination of war tax this year means that adult season tickets will be only $2.00 and Junior tickets $1.00.

CESSNA BOY HONORED

Mr. Robert Anderson of Cessna, who is the son of George W. Anderson, is a member of the Junior Class of the West Chester State Normal School. He has just been honored by the school, to the extent of being selected from a class of about 400, people to deliver the Junior Mantle Oration, on Commencement Day, June 6th. Mr. Anderson has maintained a high scholastic standing, he has been an active participant in many school activities, and has distinguished himself this year as a member of the school debating team.

BURIED IN HYNDMAN

The body of John T. Rice, who died at his residence at Cumberland, Md., on last Friday, June 2, was taken to Hyndman for burial at 1:30 o'clock Monday, June 5.

Mr. Rice is survived by his wife, Mrs. Hannah Rice, by three sons John, William and George and by seven children by his first marriage: Andrew of Boswell; Mrs. Cora Shroyer, Mrs. Clara Fleckinger and Mrs. Nora Wharton, of Cumberland; Walter of St. Mary's, Pa., and Milton and Edward of Gerome, Pa.

Mrs. Sarah Deremer

Mrs. Sarah Deremer, 74 years old, who lived in Patterson's Creek Valley, three miles south of Alaska, Mineral county, W. Va., died suddenly Friday evening. She had been sitting on the porch and arose, to go into the house and suddenly fell to the floor. Her daughter, Miss Bertha found her a little later in an unconscious condition and she died about half an hour later. Mrs. Deremer had not been in good health for some time. Upon examination it was found that her head had struck something which caused her death. Mrs. Deremer was a well known woman and highly respected in her neighborhood. She was a member of the Methodist church at Alaska where her funeral took place Sunday in charge of Undertaker J. C. Wolford. Rev. Vost officiated.

Mrs. Deremer was the widow of the late Henry Deremer who died four years ago. She was a daughter of the late Rev. John Blair, of Cumberland Valley. She is survived by two sisters in Keyser, Mrs. Wolford and Mrs. H. Rice and one brother, S. A. D. Blair, Keyser, also three daughters, Mrs. Virgie Allen and Mrs. Ada Long of Alaska, and Miss Bertha. At home, two sons, George and Charles Deremer, who live near the old homestead.

John T. Rice

The funeral of John T. Rice, who died Friday at his home, 34 South street, will take place from the home this afternoon at 12 o'clock. The body will be taken to Hyndman, Pa. on the 1:45 train where interment will be made.

One reason why its hard to get men to church is that they don't care what the other men are wearing.

BIG PLAY FESTIVAL TO-NIGHT

The Junior Chautauqua Committee, of which Miss Anna Knight is Chairman, has arranged to hold a Play Festival Friday evening at the lot back of the Court House. The fun will start at six-thirty o'clock sharp.

At this Play Festival there are going to be a number of contests, and the winners of these contests will receive a season Chautauqua ticket as a prize. The children will be grouped according to school grade and will participate in different events scheduled for these particular grades. The girls of the 7th and 8th grades and also the boys of these grades will compete in running contests. The 5th and 6th grade girls will try out in the ball throw while the 5th and 6th grade boys will stage a sack race, the 3rd and 4th grade boys will also compete in a sack race and the girls of these grades will compete in a potato race. The jumping contests are reserved for the boys of the 1st and 2nd grades. The girls of these grades will compete in the ball throw. This gives a line-up of events which will be very interesting and exciting especially since the winners will see Chautauqua free.

The girls of the 3rd and 4th grades who enter the potato race are requested to bring with them a spoon and 3 potatoes.

Besides these thrillers a kite with a free ticket attached will be cut loose at the Festival and the child who runs the kite down and gets the free ticket will see Chautauqua free.

That no child, whether a winner or not, may go away disappointed, a free auto ride has been arranged to Everett and return.

The advance man, Mr. Aclowitz, has congratulated the Bedford Chautauqua Boosters on having such a wide awake Junior Chautauqua. He says it is the finest he has ever run across.

That the Play Festival may be a complete success, all members of the Junior Chautauqua Committee are requested to be present as it will be no little task to engineer these contests.

Miss Marion Wilder, the Story Hour girl will be present at the Festival to assist and get acquainted with the kiddies.

MINISTERS MEET

The June meeting of the Bedford County Ministerial Association met in the M. E. Church Monday, June 5th at 2:00 p. m. The paper of the day was read by Rev. Ira C. Holtsapple pastor Church of the Brethren, Everett, Pa., on the subject "The Value of Denominational Preaching." It was discussed by Revs. Royer, Metger, Brosius, Himes, Taylor, Carney and Eyer.

Among other business transactions was the passing of a resolution petitioning the Bedford County Fair Association to heed the request of the Charlesville Grange and the Bedford Parent-Teacher Association to exclude from the annual Fair all gambling devices and questionable forms of amusement.

The Association adjourned until the first Monday of September. The retiring officers are W. H. B. Carney, Pres., G. H. Ketterer, Sec. The new officers are Pres. Rev. G. H. Ketterer, Everett; Sec., Rev. E. J. Himes, Schellburg Rev. B. V. Biddle, Everett and J. A. Eyer, Bedford were re-elected V. P. and Treasurer respectively.

F. S. TOMPKINS, HIKER CALLS ON GAZETTE

On last Friday afternoon F. S. Tompkins of Philadelphia called on the Gazette office enroute for Los Angeles, California. Mr. Tompkins is hiking it across the continent and expects to make the trip until September 1. He calls on the American Legion Posts enroute and determines what the various Posts are doing for the sick and disabled soldiers. Mr. Tompkins visits also soldier hospitals enroute and entertains the sick and wounded soldiers in Hebrew and Italian dialects.

On next Sunday afternoon and evening. No church services will be held in the various churches. The churches will unite at the Chautauqua tent in the afternoon and evening Morning services will be as usual.

ANOTHER COMMUNITY AUCTION SALE

Co-operation is fast becoming the keynote of all forms of Community enterprise. Interests of every description, financial, commercial, agricultural, educational, etc., have come to realize the value of this principle and to a greater or lesser degree are co-operating one with another to attain a larger measure of success towards some desired end.

The Community Auction is born of the very spirit and essence of co-operation. Its economic value may be very great and depends entirely upon the measure of cooperation accorded it by the citizens of the Community.

"A" has something for which he has no use; he brings it to the Community Auction where "B" who does need it buys it and with parties mutually benefitted. Scarcely a home in the county but has one or more articles that are dead assets to them but would be real live assets in the possession of some one who needs them—Why let all this dormant wealth lie idle? Bring it to the Community Auction at the Court House in Bedford on Wednesday, June 14th and turn it into real cash. It costs you nothing—The Advertising Club of the Bedford Chamber of Commerce, is ready to cooperate with you, provide an auctioneer, clerk and all needed help to dispose of any and all articles offered without charge to buyer or seller.

This is your auction. It's success depends upon your cooperation. The following is a partial list of offerings for Wednesday, June 14th. Many others not listed will be offered:

Rocker, 2 Stands, 5 piece Parlor Suit, Davis Sewing Machine, Oak Wash Stand, Bed and Springs, 5 Passenger "Dort" Touring Car, good condition, Ford Touring Car, 1921, Electric Starter, demountable rims, 3 new tires, condition guaranteed, Rubber-tired Carriage, Sock Knitter, Wire Flower Stand, 2 horse Spring Wagon, 1 1/2 ton Reo Truck, Vacuum Cleaner, Double Heater, Writing Desk, Edison Graphophone, lot Fruit, Jars, Zinc Covered Kitchen Table, Wood bottom Chairs, Oil Can, Round Stand, Heater, 2 Rockers, Office Chair, 8 horse power Gasoline Engine, lot household furniture, 4-horse power Gasoline Engine and many other articles too numerous to mention

MARRIAGE LICENSES

Harry McEldawney and Zella Rindard, both of Riddlesburg. Charles V. Harbaugh and Leta Claycomb, both of King township. Calton Heckerman, of Bedford and Martha Sweet of Saxton. Forest Gindespirger, of Windber and Elizabeth Flegle of Shanksville. Charles M. Pyock, of Riddlesburg township, Cambria Co., and Ruie L. Nunemaker, of New Paris. Alvin L. Claybaugh, of Monroe township and Ethel B. Blankley, of Monroe township. George V. Gardner, of Bedford and Elva E. Leach, of Everett.

IOWA SHIPS FROM HARDING

Not only Indiana and Pennsylvania have issued a slap to the Harding Administrators but on last Tuesday the rock-ribbed Republican State of Iowa took another dig at them by nominating Smith Brookhart for United States Senator from that state. The Administration at Washington made a strenuous effort to stem the tide of progressivism but utterly failed. These three progressive victories in strong Republican states have set the Harding administration into a topsy-turvy condition.

TWO SOMERSET MINERS SHOT GOING TO WORK

Somerset, Pa., June 7.—While on their way to work in an automobile this morning, three miners employed by the Reitz Coal Company at Reitz Mine No. 4, near Cairnbrook, Somerset County, were shot from ambush and as a result two are in the hospital. They are Harry Dailey and B. W. Ling. John Wiltz was only slightly injured.

Nothing ruins an old car like the neighbors getting a new one.

Don't forget the Base Ball game this evening at 5 p. m.

LESSON FOR JUNE 11

JEREMIAH CAST INTO PRISON

LESSON TEXT—Jeremiah 38:1-13.
GOLDEN TEXT—Be not afraid of their faces: for I am with thee to deliver thee, saith the Lord.—Jer. 1:8.
REFERENCE MATERIAL—Gen. 39:12-23; Jer. 20:1-18; Luke 2:18-20; Acts 12:1-11; 16:19-31.
PRIMARY TOPIC—How God Cared for Jeremiah.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jeremiah's Bold Truth-telling.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Faithful in the Face of Danger.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Lessons From Jeremiah's Character.

I. Jeremiah Predicts the Capture of Jerusalem (vv. 1-3).

1. To Whom—the People (v. 1). Jeremiah had been taken out of the prison by the king (37:17), and ordered confined to the court, and the people had free access to him in the court (32:12). From this place of limited confinement Jeremiah announced to the people their approaching captivity.

2. Counsel Given (vv. 2, 3). (1) All that remaineth in the city shall die by the sword, famine and pestilence. (2) He that goeth forth to the Chaldeans shall live. "He shall have his life for a prey" doubtless means that he shall escape with his life, though losing all else.

II. Jeremiah Accused by the Princes (vv. 4, 5).

1. "He weakeneth the hands of the men and all the people" (v. 4). From a human standpoint what they said was true, but since Jeremiah was but the interpreter of God to the nation they ought to have heeded his advice to surrender.

2. "This man seeketh not the welfare of this people, but the hurt" (v. 4). This charge was utterly false. Jeremiah was the best friend of the people, for he faithfully proclaimed to them God's judgment upon them for their sins and advised them how to make the best of their unfortunate situation.

3. The King's Cowardly Act (v. 5). Jeremiah is abandoned by his cowardly friend. The very one whom Jeremiah was trying to help deserted him. The king was afraid of the Chaldeans, the princes, Jeremiah and God.

III. Jeremiah Cast into the Dungeon (v. 6).

This was not a regular prison, but a cistern which had doubtless been emptied of its water during the siege, leaving only "mire." Into this mire he sank. The purpose was to let Jeremiah die there. There was no possible way to escape. In this situation Jeremiah is a type of Christ (Psalm 69). Jeremiah was one of the bravest of God's servants.

IV. Jeremiah Rescued From the Dungeon (vv. 7-13).

1. By Whom—Ebed-melech, an African servant (vv. 7-9). The Jewish prophet whom his own countrymen tried to destroy is saved by a Gentile, which may be thought of as foreshadowing the Gentiles' attitude toward Christ. Though Ebed-melech had a colored skin he was the whitest man in Jerusalem. He was not only sympathetic, but courageous. He went to the king and boldly declared that the princes had done evil in imprisoning Jeremiah.

2. The Method (vv. 10-13). The king yielded to his request and furnished a guard to prevent interference with the work of rescue. He let down soft rags and worn-out garments by ropes and instructed Jeremiah to put them under his arms and under the ropes so as to prevent injury to him as he was lifted up. They lifted him out of the dungeon and he was permitted the freedom of the court of the prison.

Why did Jeremiah have such a hard time? Why do the purest and best men and women have to suffer? Why are God's prophets unpopular? Jeremiah, the prophet who declared God's power to deliver, goes to prison and suffers. "Why do the righteous suffer" is an age-old question.

1. The power of God is more strikingly shown in deliverance than in keeping from trials. This was so in the case of the Hebrews in the fiery furnace and Daniel in the den of lions.

2. Great gain accrues to the sufferers; e. g. the Hebrews in the fiery furnace were not only kept from being burned, but had walking with them the Son of God; Job through his trials was brought to see himself.

3. Suffering turns out to the furtherance of God's cause; e. g. Job becomes the priest through whose intercession his friends are pardoned; Paul's sufferings furthered the preaching of the gospel; John through banishment on the Isle of Patmos was given the vision of the Revelation.

Zion.
But Judah shall dwell for ever, and Jerusalem from generation to generation. For I will cleanse their blood that I have not cleansed; for the Lord dwelleth in Zion.—Joel 3:20 and 21.

Be Honest.
Recompense to no man evil for evil. Provide things honest in the sight of all men.—Romans 17.

The Perfect Man.
If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man.—James 3:2.

Rare Fun Well Done.--Packard

ALTON PACKARD.

"I HAD thought of retiring from the Chautauqua platform this season," writes Packard, the cartoonist, "but I have yielded to the urgent demands of many friends—in my home town—to remain on the road—and pay them as soon as I can."

"I have also discovered a new source of revenue in the chalk talk line. Hereafter my pictures will not be given away after my entertainments, as heretofore, but they will be sent to Battle Creek, Michigan, and made into breakfast food. The new product is called 'Predigested Scrambled Chalktalks.' Ask your grocer."

"Rare Fun Well Done" is Packard's specialty. He is one of the highest salaried of all platform entertainers and there are few artists, if any, who are in greater demand throughout the entire country.

Alton Packard deserves the title "genius," for he is artist and cartoonist, musician and composer, humorist and entertainer. Beyond all these accomplishments, he is one of those men whom all his acquaintances prize as a companion; and they call him "Pack."

Broadcast Talk By Plattenburg

CHARLES H. PLATTENBURG.

THE Kentucky Retail Merchants' Association, after hearing Mr. Plattenburg's address on "The Old Town in a New World," had 300,000 copies printed and scattered broadcast over the blue grass state.

When the Rural Credits law was being discussed in congress, Mr. Plattenburg was asked by a member of the senate to permit the publication of his same address in the Congressional Record.

Before taking on platform work professionally, fifteen years ago, Mr. Plattenburg was an Iowa newspaper man. He is to speak here on Chautauqua's third night.

INDIAN GIRLS TO ENTERTAIN AT OUR LOCAL CHAUTAUQUA

PRINCESS TEATA AND HER INDIAN FRIENDS.

THREE TRIBES are represented in the Princess Teata Company, announced for Chautauqua's closing performance. The Indian Princess Teata is a Chickasaw descendant and her name, translated, means "the dawn." Dramatic art is her specialty.

Miss Elizabeth Thompson, whose Indian name is Downwin, is a Sioux girl from Fort Thompson, South Dakota. By many she is considered one of the foremost Indian contraltos in America.

Miss Brazilia Dunn, the third member of the company, is a Choctaw Indian, whose accomplishments as a pianist are noteworthy, even outside her race.

When Princess Teata and her Indian companions come here for Chautauqua they will present a program entirely different from any previously enjoyed by Chautauqua patrons. They will be elaborately costumed in Indian garb, and their stage settings will give the genuine Indian atmosphere to the entertainment.

Chautauqua Comedy Ran For Two Years on Broadway, N. Y.

SCENE FROM "FRIENDLY ENEMIES."

HOW TWO life-long friends, each following his convictions, became "Friendly Enemies," is the story of the play to be given at the Redpath Chautauqua.

"Friendly Enemies" is a keen, irresistible comedy, full of strong, dramatic situations. Its fundamental theme is the love of husband and wife, father and son, man and his country. The production played on Broadway for two years, as well as in England. In it are found the fun of "Pogash and Perimutter" and the pathos of "The Music Master."

Louis Mann and Sam Bernard star.

red in the original production. They made famous the humorous and dramatic clash of two lovable, human and eccentric characters—the greatest friends in the world in all matters except one, namely, loyalty to their adopted country. One was 100 per cent American; the other was still in sympathy with the German traditions of his youth. The latter became converted to Americanism, but the manner of his conversion, and the incidents and play of characters that preceded it, must be seen to be adequately understood and appreciated.

Costumes Are Used to Good Advantage by Festival Four

FESTIVAL MIXED QUARTET.

COSTUMES will be used effectively by the Festival Quartet on Chautauqua's third day. Included in this company are outstanding singers from the ranks of professional musicians in the middle west. All have had experience as Chautauqua entertainers, and thoroughly understand the art of pleasing the great crowds which gather beneath the canvas canopy.

Hard to Explain.

Has it ever been fully explained why it is that a man on a cold, raw day will sit four hours uncomplainingly on a hard board in a rowboat and hold a fish pole, yet squirm and fidget and fume if he is asked to sit more than an hour and fifteen minutes on a cushioned seat in a well-warmed church?

Snakes in the Ocean.

It is not generally known that there are snakes in the ocean. There are numerous varieties of small snakes that live in all oceans; then there are the eels, of course, which go from the salt water to the fresh. In the waters around southern Asia there lives the banded sea snake, which has stripes around its body and broad tail, and can swim with great speed.—Christian Science Monitor.

ATLAS PORTLAND CEMENT

STORAGE is a big factor in profitable marketing and economical buying. Like most worth while things it works both ways. For the farmer or the man in town a vegetable and fruit cellar is a real economy.

A concrete root cellar properly made, vermin-proof, water-proof and permanent, will soon pay for itself in more ways than one.

Your dealer can give you plans to construct a small one, or your local contractor can quickly build it for you. Either one is apt to suggest you use Atlas Portland Cement, "the Standard by which all other makes are measured."

A Good Reputation plus a Better Price — $10.90

THE new low mark of $10.90 for the 30 x 3½ size "Usco" created something of a sensation. Naturally, the first impulsive remark was on the "wonderful price."

Even more to the point are the comments of today.

People are getting more used to the $10.90 price—but the "Usco" value is still a cause for wonder.

With thousands of $10.90 "Uscos" running today, every locality has had a chance to check up on the surprising tire value.

Let all these "Usco" Tires now serving their owners so well remind you of this—

Whatever the price of "Usco," it has got to deliver big value because it has always done so.

PENNSYLVANIA STATE ITEMS

Sunbury.—Burglars invaded the home of the Sunbury Elks and stole a small amount of money.

Harrisburg.—The board of pardons announced it had recommended to the governor the pardoning of Walter Yeakel and C. L. Evans, the two Reading railway trainmen who were convicted of disobeying orders in connection with the Bryn Athyn wreck. Their case was argued May 19 but held under advisement pending certain queries the board desired to make relative to employment. The pardon was asked on the grounds of mercy for men in an unusual situation.

Ashland.—Ralph Weldon, aged 21, sustained a broken back and fractures of both arms while six other persons escaped with bruises when, in rounding a curve, a car driven by William Moeller skidded, turned two complete somersaults and pinned the occupants under it.

Chester.—Howard E. Thyng, secretary of the Chester Business Men's Association, has lost the sight of one eye and is under the care of two eye specialists and two nurses. Less than three weeks ago he contracted what appeared to be a mere cold in the head. Finally it settled in his eyes, both of which became infected. When the infection spread to the corneas and he found his sight dimming, the patient awoke to the seriousness of his plight. Every effort is being made to save the other eye, although Thyng has become so weak that he is unable to feed himself.

Bloomburg.—Council fixed July 17 for a special election on a $160,000 bond issue for improvements.

Harrisburg.—Funds in the state treasury at the close of May aggregated $21,805,225.38, of which $11,680,158.16 was in the road bond fund. The general fund contained $236,204.64 and the motor vehicle license fund $6,872,417.15. May receipts were $6,222,729.85, and expenditures $6,274,733.90.

State College.—A campaign with the dual purpose of establishing the college as the state university and of raising a fund of $2,000,000 for health and welfare buildings, was announced by President Thomas. It is proposed to make the present college an institution with facilities for giving university instruction to all qualified Pennsylvania boys and girls who may wish to enter. The $2,000,000 fund will be devoted to the erection of immediately needed residences for young men and women, physical education buildings for both, a Students' Union, a varsity hall and a hospital. The present hospital has only eight beds for a campus population of more than 3700. The college now has an enrollment of 3200 exclusive of the summer session, which this year will have 3000 students. One thousand qualified applicants were refused admission last year because of the lack of housing and teaching facilities.

Uniontown.—Refused a new trial, following his conviction on the charge of murdering his wife at Vanderbilt last December, Elmer C. Miller was sentenced by Judge Van Swearingen to be put to death in the electric chair at a time to be set by Governor Sproul. When asked if he had anything to say before the death sentence was imposed, Miller declared in loud and clear tones: "All I have to say is that my children told the worst lies ever told in order to send me to the electric chair and get possession of my property." Miller, who pleaded self-defense, in a petition for a new trial claimed that his older children deliberately plotted to have him sent to the electric chair in order that they could share in his estate, valued at about $20,000.

Catawissa.—Attacked by a bull when she went to the barn to feed the cattle, Margaret Miscannon, aged 15, is in a critical condition. One temple was ripped open by one of the bull's horns and an artery was exposed but not punctured.

Sunbury.—While his 10-year-old sister looked on helplessly, Alvin, 11-year-old son of C. C. Bauman, was kicked in the face by a horse. Both jaws, his collar bone and ribs were broken, and some teeth were knocked out, but the doctors said he would recover.

Bethlehem.—Litigation that has been pending before the public service commission and the courts for some time between the New Street Bridge company, a private concern owning a toll bridge, and the Lehigh Valley Transit company, on the rate charged for passage of trolley cars over the bridge has been settled. Instead of a rate of one-half cent a passenger heretofore paid by the trolley company to the bridge company, the former has agreed to pay the bridge company a flat rate of $13,500 a year for three years.

Reading.—Ambitious to become a movie star, Mary Lewis, aged 16, of Dick street, left home and has been located in California by the Y. W. O. A. She will be returned home by the Travelers Aid Society.

Harrisburg.—Arrangements are being made for bids for construction of from twenty to twenty-five sections of highway this year at the state highway department. The bulk of the work will be done for counties.

Milroy.—The will of the late William Copeland, a native here, leaves $500 to each of the churches of the village.

Harrisburg.—The regimental guidon of the Seventy-sixth Pennsylvania Volunteers, wrapped about the hickory pole to which it was attached when the flagstaff was shot to pieces in the civil war, has been presented to the commonwealth of Pennsylvania by Major Robert S. Magee, of this city. The historic relic has been in the possession of Major Magee's family since the regiment was mustered out.

Maston.—The annual meeting of the Pennsylvania State Editorial Association, originally scheduled for Williamsport, will be held at the Penn-Harris Hotel, Harrisburg, on June 23 and 24, it was announced by President C. N. Andrews.

Lewistown.—The Viscose company, which built a million-dollar plant at Lewistown last year, will break ground this week for an additional unit.

Lancaster.—Mr. and Mrs. Edwin F. Stauffer, of Goodville, this county, celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary with a family reunion.

Columbia.—Robert Conklin, of this place, was almost scalped when he fell from a swing, fifteen stitches being required to close the wound.

McAdoo.—Rebecca, 11-year-old daughter of Nathan Gorin, of this place, fell twenty-one feet out of a window while helping clean house, but escaped with a few bruises.

Northumberland.—Lightning struck the home of Councilman J. H. Ford, ripped a hole in the roof, shattered two old guns standing inside and loosened weather boards and much of the plaster on the second floor. The family felt the shock, but no one was injured.

Connellsville.—Another use has been found for a distillery. The bonded warehouse of the Connellsville Distilling company is to be transformed into a peanut factory. One of the main products will be fried peanuts. Peanut flakes, similar to cornflakes, puffed peanuts and a peanut drink, which is to be used as a substitute for coffee, are also to be manufactured, it is said.

Harrisburg.—When paper is waste paper will be decided by expert paper men for Superintendent of Public Printing Miller. Tons of paper intended for Smull's Legislative Handbook and other state publications were in a fire which destroyed a warehouse some weeks ago in this city and there has been a controversy about the damage done to the paper. The state insures its paper and sells it when it becomes waste. The question has arisen whether the paper is too damaged to be used and, to settle all the knotty questions which have arisen, experts will be asked to make an examination.

Lewistown.—Game Warden R. B. McCoy, of this place, reports eleven dogs killed in Mifflin county during the past month which were caught in the act of running game.

Altoona.—With a continuous service of almost fifty years in various capacities with the Pennsylvania railroad, Thomas F. Carney, of Altoona, will be retired on a pension June 1.

Pittsburgh.—Virgil B. Bennett, a waiter at the Pennsylvania railroad station, was arrested, charged with the theft of a string of pearls from Mildred Harris, a motion picture actress. Captain Frazer, of the railroad police, reported that the pearls had been recovered at Bennett's home. Bennett said that he found them on the floor of the restaurant room. The actress reported the loss of the pearls while she was appearing at a Pittsburgh theatre last week.

Uniontown.—How he married three women without getting a divorce and failed to remember the name of two of his wives was admitted by George Ashton, of Chicago, when he was arraigned on a charge of failing to support his third wife. He said he married a girl in Pittsburgh shortly after his return from the war, but could not remember her name or address. Later he married Nancy Cope Ashton, of Dunbar township, Fayette county, under the same conditions, and still a third wife in Chicago, whose name he also had forgotten. He told the court that he formerly lived in Chicago, but that his father now lives in Charleston, W. Va. He was sent to the workhouse.

Harrisburg.—The highway department has announced the appointment of Carl H. Carlson as superintendent of state highways in McKean county and Robert H. Vought for Union and Snyder counties.

Hazleton.—Mayor James G. Harvey ordered arrests for violation of the curfew law as a result of numerous thefts by boys.

Connellsville.—Collapsing on the street shortly after she had eaten a dish of ice cream, Mrs. Jesse Percy is critically ill at her home here.

Wakefield.—In ill health for years, Joseph K. Bradley, 47 years old, a prominent farmer here, died a few hours after taking poison.

Hollidaysburg.—Postmasters of third and fourth class in Blair county have formed a branch of the National Welfare Association.

Altoona.—Mrs. Helen Mason Babb, of this place, was appointed a trustee of the Blair county mothers' pension system.

Lewistown.—The chamber of commerce essay contest for pupils of the high school here was won by James W. Hoffman.

White Haven.—Frank B. Alexander, aged 28, of Ridgewood, N. J., who was severely gassed by the Germans in France, died at the sanatorium here.

Altoona.—Just as Dr. L. G. Doak, a chiropractor, was about to examine William R. Confer, aged 5, a Pennsylvania railroad brakeman, Confer died suddenly of heart trouble. It was Confer's first visit to Doak's office.

WE'RE COLD TO REFORMS

We have not had in our time a President who was a business man or who had close acquaintance with business methods. The Chief Executives have, for the most part, not been executives as that term is now understood. Anything but. They regarded the governmental machine as one regards a hired motor car—a piece of mechanism in which to get somewhere, and with no thought of its power-transmission system or economy of operation.

Mr. Taft did sense the fact that he was at the head of an organization whose activities are almost as varied as those of the entire business world. Mr. Harding, I believe, shares this feeling.

As Mr. Taft pointed out, this great organization has never been studied in detail as one piece of administrative mechanism. No comprehensive effort has been made, until very recently, to list its many activities or to group them in such a way as to present a clear picture of what the government is doing. No satisfactory statement has ever been published of the financial transactions of the government as a whole. With large interests at stake congress and the executive have never had all the information which should be currently available if the most intelligent direction is to be given to the daily national business.

Congress, the President and the administrative officers have been attempting to discharge their duties without full information as to the agencies through which the work of the government is being performed. In the past, services, agencies, bureaus, what not, have been created one by one as exigencies have seemed to demand, with little or no reference to any scheme of organization of the government as a whole.

Mr. Taft pointed out all this and made an earnest effort to change it. With what result? Why, just exactly none. Congress was cold. The public—meaning you and me—was colder. We didn't take any interest in the project, and therefore congress politely yawned it away into the tail grass and out of sight. Mr. Taft was given enough money to employ an efficiency and economy commission and to make inquiry into the methods of transacting the public business of the executive departments and other government establishments.

The inquiry was made and the changes recommended, but nothing has ever been done about it. This economy and efficiency commission was very conservative and cautious. It took Mr. Taft's view that the problem of good administration is not one that can be solved at one time. It is a continuously present one. This commission, made up of excellent men, suggested that the revenue-cutter service be abolished and its activities be taken over by other services. It was estimated that by so doing a saving of not less than $1,000,000 could be made.

Another report recommended that the lighthouse and life-saving services be administered by a single bureau instead of as at that time, by two bureaus located in different departments. It was estimated that this consolidation would result in a saving of not less than $100,000 yearly.

The abolition of the returns office of the interior department was recommended, at an estimated direct saving of about $25,000 a year, in addition to a large indirect economy in the reduction of work to be performed in the several offices.

The consolidation of the six auditing offices of the treasury and the inclusion in the auditing system of the seven naval officers who audited customs accounts at the principal ports was urged. The change was expected to produce an immediate saving of at least $135,000 yearly.

From this modest start other changes and reforms and savings were to be made.

But we weren't interested in the high cost of government or the high cost of living eleven years ago. Mr. Taft didn't get a rise out of us. He didn't have much of a pull with congress, either, poor man, and all his inquiry went for nothing as far as any action was concerned.

He and his commission did bring out and establish, however, certain facts and conditions. It was a trustworthy and competent investigation as far as it went. That is something to be good.

There is a patent disposition in congress now to take the whole problem of the routine administrative processes of the government under consideration and see how best to improve them. Whether anything really worth while will come out of it will depend entirely on the degree of interest you display. If you will take the trouble to show that you know that the national business is mismanaged and costs too much, and that you are tired of it, there will be action.

THE COMMUNITY SLACKER

There are not many handsome people but some are less comical than others. The type of man in Alton Packard's cartoon above is familiar. Bone in head instead of in the back is his difficulty. He is a natural born trombone player; he loves to sit around and let things slide. He is solemn as Solomon when he has to spend a dime and he enjoys home so much he never takes his wife out anywhere. He jollies her up with his own humor, which is so contagious it makes her sick. He says: "Man wants but little here below"—he gets it. Packard's cartoon is "pat," as usual, and the laugh is in the right place.

Fox Farms.

There are ten or twelve fox farms in Alaska. One of them, situated in the Tanana valley, a mile and a half from Fairbanks, consists of ten acres of cleared land, the greater part of which is covered with pens in which the animals live.

All Called On to Show Courage.

Whatever your sex or position, life is a battle in which you are to show your pluck; and woe be to the coward! Whether passed on a bed of sickness or a tented field, it is ever the same fair play and admits no foolish distinctions. Despair and postponement are cowardice and defeat. Men were born to succeed, not to fail.—Thoreau.

Unpalatable Ship "Bread."

In grandfather's day a ship took on her supply of bread for a voyage in casks before leaving home. This supply had to last until the end of the voyage, though that might be a year or two. The bread was in the form of hard biscuits. It kept fairly well when dry, but often it got damp and moldy, or wormy.

Wanted Information.

While I was upstairs, our little Elizabeth called that the cat wanted to get outdoors because she had been teasing him. I replied: "I will be down in a minute and let him out, but don't tickle him in the meantime." When I got down she had been looking him all over, and said: "Daddy, where is his meantime?"—Chicago Examiner.

The Kangaroo Industry.

In Australia kangaroo farming is an important industry. The hides are valuable and the tendons extremely fine; indeed, they are the best known to surgeons for sewing up wounds, and especially for holding broken bones together, being much finer and tougher than catgut, which is used extensively.

Demands for Daugherty's Resignation By Own Party Press.

Among the prominent Republican and Independent papers that have suggested or demanded Attorney General Daugherty's resignation are the following:

New York Tribune (Rep.)—To date no sufficient reason is given why Mr. Daugherty should not write his resignation or why the President should not demand it if not voluntarily tendered.

New York World (Ind.)—Whatever obligation the President may consider himself to be under to Mr. Daugherty, he is under an immensely higher obligation to the American people to see that the administration of justice shall deserve public respect and confidence. Mr. Daugherty's fitness to hold high office has been challenged in Congress, and a strong case has been made out against him. He has evaded answering his accusers. Is the administration so blind as not to see not only the political consequences of shielding the Attorney General against investigation but the immeasurable wrong it commits against the public in retaining at the head of the Department of Justice a man whose honor and probity are questioned?

Baltimore Sun (Ind.)—The disclosures regarding Attorney General Daugherty are not mere headline material for an edition or two. They may well give the administration real anxiety and concern. When a conservative Republican newspaper like the New York Tribune calls upon the Attorney General to resign, when the demand is echoed by the New York Herald and other important Republican journals, it is high time for the President to appraise the damaging effect that the revelations have had upon the country and to ascertain whether the administration of the Department of Justice is in the hands of persons likely to command public confidence.

Philadelphia North American (Ind.)—If Attorney General Daugherty retains a shred of regard for the President and the administration, he will resign without delay an office which has been put under a cloud by his inebriety. But the responsibility goes higher. President Harding owes it to himself, to his administration, and to the country to force the severance of an association which is no longer defensible.

New York Tribune (Rep.)—Unless Attorney General Daugherty has a better defense of his relation to the unseaworthy Morse pardon than thus far has come from him or his friends he should relieve President Harding of embarrassment by a prompt resignation. Mr. Daugherty should never have been named as Attorney General.

New York Globe (Rep.)—The case against Mr. Daugherty is strong enough without additional incrimination. He knew that he was being not hired to furnish legal advice but to use his influence. One that understanding he took, or agreed to take, a large fee. He can clear himself only by proving that the folder letter and his own signed letter and contract which Senator Caraway introduced into the record on Saturday are forgeries.

The misstep and the publicity and scandal which have accompanied it are enough to retire Mr. Daugherty permanently into private life.

Philadelphia Public Ledger (Rep.)—The plight in which Mr. Daugherty now finds himself is one that threatens and effects the integrity of the Federal Administration. When the integrity, veracity and the general qualifications of the Attorney General of the United States threaten to become a "campaign issue," the administration of Federal justice is embarrassed, impeded and clouded. If the whole business is not cleared up now, it will go into the coming political campaign, and neither Mr. Daugherty nor his political and official associates will be the gainer. In the present state and situation the Attorney General is a public liability and embarrassment.

HOW TO KEEP YOUR BABY WELL

Clothing the Baby

Dress the baby carefully, turning him as little as possible. The mother soon learns the quickest and best way. It tires baby when dressing takes too long.

Clothing must be suited to the weather and to the age and condition of the child. Young babies and those who are weakly need warm clothing, as they are easily chilled. Robust babies quickly get used to the changes in the weather, and are often too warmly dressed, especially when they are older and start to run about.

If the baby's hands and feet are cold or he looks pinched and blue about the lips, he needs warmer clothing. If he perspires and his body is moist to the touch, he has too much on. Overdressed babies are likely to be restless and fretful. In no weather, the clothes should be light; in cold weather much heavier and warmer clothes are needed. Most doctors believe that shirts, bands, stockings for the baby should have some wool in them. If necessary they may be of the lightest weight, and in the hottest weather only the band, diaper and slip need be worn.

All baby's clothes should be simple. The dresses and skirts may be 26 inches long, the extra length being used to cover the baby's feet. Many mothers rather have baby's dresses short from the start. This saves both time and money.

The following list gives the clothing a new-born baby needs:

- Diapers Dozen—4 to 6
- Knitted Bands Number—2
- Knitted Shirts Number—2 to 4
- Flannel Petticoats Number—2 to 4
- Night Gowns 3
- White Cotton Slips Number—4 to 8
- Coats and Capes 3
- Long Booties or Stockings Pairs—2 to 4
- Sacques Number—3
- Wraps or blankets Number—3

How to make and take care of these things will be discussed in the next few talks.

When dressing or undressing the baby place him on the table described in the talk on Baby's Path and draw the clothes over his feet rather than over his head. Never use starch in washing a baby's clothes as it makes them stiff and rubs and chafes the skin.

The important things to remember about a baby's clothing are that they should fit the body be loose enough to give the baby free use of his arms and legs, and still be tight enough to be comfortable.

Next week's talk will be diapers and bands

G. O. P. MIRRORS OF CONGRESS (No. 2)

"Little Brothers of the Profitless."

(From a speech by Gifford Pinchot at Cambridge (Mass.) Presidential Club, June 13, 1919.)

Crane, Harding, Watson and their like, and Penrose, the flower of the flock, are the little brothers of the profiteers. They believe in money first and human welfare, if at all, long afterward. Without such men as these the great monopolies could never have been formed. Monopoly handed by big business is the fundamental reason for the exorbitant cost of living. To make the cost of living higher is the reason and the purpose of monopoly, and reactionaries in Congress and in the legislature of every state are the tools big business use to that end. No wonder the people are against them

"Leader Mondell's Job Too Big for Him."

(From the Manchester (N. H.) Rep.)

There are many reasons why the country, particularly the Republicans of the country, ought to be profoundly grateful that Mondell's leadership of the House is nearing its close. He is a candidate for the Senate from Wyoming, and no matter what the issue may be in that contest, he will no longer remain in the House to jeopardize Republican policies and lend aid to the enemy by his bungling of a job which has always been many sizes too big for him.

State and National experts who spoke at the Jersey Field Day in Everett last Saturday complimented members of the Everett Jersey Bull Association on the fine display of 35 head of cattle and especially their progress shown by the purchase of such excellent sires to head these herds. Mr. R. R. Welch, National Dairy authority of Grove City, Pa., speaking to over 300 dairymen in the moving picture hall said that just such a step as a Bull Association was first taken by the Grove City community which now is one of the leading farming sections of the state in a dairy prosperity. Many examples of his personal knowledge were given to illustrate this point.

The meeting in the movie hall was the final event of a crowded day. During the forenoon the exhibit of 5 bulls of exceptional production breeding which were recently purchased by the Everett Jersey Bull Association furnished an attraction as well as the judging demonstration given by Prof. J. R. Dawson of the Pennsylvania State College Extension Service. At this demonstration the cattle were judged by age classes with three first prizes given as follows:

- 1st. Aged cow, John S. Herschberger, $10.00
- 1st. 3 yrs. and under 4, Chas Mearkle, $10.00
- 1st. 2 yrs. and under 3, Allen Eshelman, $10.00

Keen interest was shown in the slides and moving pictures of leading Jersey cattle shown by the American Jersey Cattle Club and the Quaker Oats Company.

Prof. J. R. Dawson who judged the cattle also gave an interesting talk in which he pointed out the fact that cows giving large quantities of milk and butterfat produced these products at lower cost than low producing cows, thus insuring a difference between cost of production and selling price.

Presentation of prizes for best cattle was made for the Everett Business Men's Association by their President, Leslie Blackburn who spoke of the interdependence of the man in town and the man in the country.

"Fordney a Liability."

(From the Worcester (Mass.) Telegram (Rep.)

But Mr. Fordney showed himself up in his boasting of his prophecies and in his school-time jingle. He is a liability of the Harding Administration and until he is recognized as such there will not be great improvement in the congressional handling of the bonus, the tariff and other questions fully as important as the election of 1920.

BLUE SLIPPERS

By MILDRED WHITE

Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union.

J. Carlton Saunders came to himself with a start, as Elizabeth spoke his name. He knew from the tone of his sister's voice that she had spoken before, and had been ignored.

"You asked, my dear—" he questioned.

"When you are going away," Elizabeth retorted, "isn't it about time for one of your trips?"

"Yes," Carlton answered, "I ought to be in New York this week."

He frowned; it was diplomacy to pretend these business trips a bore and a bother. Otherwise, the two elderly and dominating sisters who were his housekeepers and companions, would feel themselves cheated of the participation of a pleasure.

As a matter of fact, Carlton Saunders, in the prosy regime of his small town home, looked forward to these escapes into an outer world with secret anticipation and enjoyment. Elizabeth and Katherine were good sisters, annoyingly anxious concerning his welfare.

J. Carlton appreciated their solicitude, while he fretted under the constant surveillance. There were those who insisted that the kindly man might long ago have rejoiced in a home of his own with a wife to share it, had it not been for Elizabeth's and Katherine's rule. But the brother in his heart refuted this.

Were his sisters not bringing before him constantly possible applicants for matrimony?

"Yes," he answered Elizabeth again, "I must be in New York this week."

"We will pack your valise," Katherine said, "and don't forget to wear your rubbers."

But when he walked into the New York hotel a few days later, he had left, unconsciously, his habitual diffidence at home. His name on the register was signed merely Jack Saunders. The clerk bowed in greeting. "Can't give you your usual room," he explained apologetically, "we are filled up."

The room the bellboy ushered him into was comfortable enough. But as he turned to place coat and hat on the hanger, J. Saunders stared; a filmy blue cloud of something had forestalled him there. While all about the small room was the indefinable fragrance of that mystical romance, which he had missed. Lilac, or lily of the valley or just sweet springtime—what was the alluring odor which enchanted his senses?

A tap on the door. Carlton turned guiltily. A woman's face was raised to his—her eyes were as blue as the filmy cloud on the hanger, but they were not the eyes of a young girl—nor yet the calm gazing eyes that Elizabeth would have recommended.

"I am afraid I left some of my belongings in this room," the sweet-faced woman said. "I had decided to occupy it when the clerk discovered that the one I prefer was vacated. So they carried my grip in there. I am sorry—" she paused, and then at his bow of permission, gathered up her apparel and went on her way. But the breath of springtime remained.

When J. Carlton went into the dining hall at evening, he saw the young woman seated alone at a secluded table. He liked the plainness of her blue serge dress, which was such a different plainness from Julia Wells's, or his sister's; and he liked the piquant hat that she becomingly wore. As he passed down the corridor to his room, it gave him an unaccountable feeling of relief, to hear the woman at the hall desk address the lady of the blue cloud as "Miss Darby." Miss, then she was not married. He speculated about her, as he bent over his writing. The usually matter-of-fact John Carlton could not write; he could not take hold of his work; he decided to retire. And there on the floor at his feet, lay a pair of small blue slippers, quilted satin slippers with ridiculous fluffy pompons upon either toe. So, she had forgotten these. They were the sort of slippers a Cinderella of past dreaming might have chosen—to slip on in the firelight. The following morning he sank into a chair in an adjoining "coffee house" and opened his paper. Springtime floated provocatively around him, lilac and lily-of-the-valley springtime. Two very blue eyes smiled over a coffee cup, opposite.

"Good morning," greeted the lady of the blue cloud, "thank you for returning my slippers."

"I travel," she told him upon their third chance breakfast together, "for a linen company. Imported linens. My knowledge in that line was my one chance for self-support after my father died. It's a good business, but it leaves me homeless. That's—the drawback."

"I have a home—" Carlton said musingly, "an old place, with bushes around it."

"Not," asked the woman eagerly, "not lilac bushes?" Carlton nodded.

"How I would love it," she exclaimed.

"I am old," he answered her irrelevantly. "I was mourning over my bald head this morning."

"So much—" asked the lady opposite, "that you quite missed the clear youth of your eyes?"

When Elizabeth and Katherine received a telegram some days later, they stared at each other in speechless amazement.

"Married," read the brief message from their brother, "bringing my wife home with me."

INDIANA'S SENATORIAL MIX-UP

During the primary campaign in Indiana former Senator Beveridge wanted it to be understood that he was as good a Republican as Senator New and stood with President Harding. So he did, with important reservations. On the four-power treaty, without raising an unseemly disturbance, he was at odds with the Administration. As a matter of political expediency, the Republican State Convention at Indianapolis, where Senator Watson delivered his "keynote" speech, after a consultation with the President, did not endorse the four-power treaty. To have done so would have been embarrassing to Mr. Beveridge, who is against the treaty.

Directly opposed to Mr. Beveridge's position is that of former Gov. Ralston, the Democratic candidate for the Senate. At the State Convention of his party this week at Indianapolis he expressed approval of the four-power treaty and willingness to see it tried out. More than that, during the coming campaign he promises to do his utmost to extract from Mr. Beveridge "one kindly word" in support of the treaty, such as he has never yet uttered.

It is a strange situation, full of contradictions. Because of the greatest achievement of the Harding Administration the appointed candidate of the Republican Party, professing entire loyalty, poses as an insurgent, while the Democratic candidate, of necessity a partisan opponent, goes over to the President's side. The prospects are good that for the next five months on the subject of the four-power treaty Mr. Beveridge will have less to say than his rival in the Senatorial contest.

Here Comes The Bride

This is the merry month of June which puts the wedding bells in tune, when men see those who soon will boss 'em all camouflaged with orange blossom. O blushing bride, O gentle dear, push back the tresses from your ear, I have some words for you to hear. When all mankind were troglodytes, before the dates that history cites a female person had no rights. The bridegroom's plan for home sweet home was bending saplings on her dome. But times have changed since those beginnings and women long have had their innings. Since Satan made the rolling pin, the human head is all too thin. If Jason calls his sou' his own, rap gently on his frontal bone, but bear in mind the tool is meant to stupefy, not crack or dent. From self assertion you must wear him, but do be careful when you bean him. I wish you luck, I hope you win, I'm very strong for discipline; but yet as oft as once a week, for him some freedom I bespeak, or you should give no wrathful sign, providing he is home by nine, nor bounce his head against a rafter for coming just a minute after. So, nobly just, but sternly great, step to the helm and navigate; you are the captain, he the mate. And when he tries back talk with you he'll soon be nothing but the crew. Nay more, if he a bit too far go, he may be classed as simply cargo.

No "Protection" for Daugherty

The Senate was discussing an amendment to paragraph 316 in the Fordney-McCumber tariff bill, when Senator Caraway interpreted the subject of Attorney General Daugherty to allege that the Attorney General was having members of the Senate and House shadowed. At the conclusion of Senator Caraway's speech the following witticisms were exchanged:

Mr. McCUMBER—Mr. President, there is no Harry Daugherty amendment proposed to paragraph 316.

Mr. CARAWAY—No, he is on the free list.

Watson Fools Hoosier G. O. P. by "Concealing" World War.

Senator "Jim" Watson, who out in Indiana passes for a statesman, is certainly sly and foxy when it comes to making a keynote political speech. He told his fellow-Republicans at the Indiana Republican State Convention that the previous administration had created "a mountain of obligations," and then he showed them that Mr. Harding was conducting the government for much less money. The Senator's foxiness came in by come along from his hearers the fact that the Wilson administration had been mixed up in some kind of a war.

Senator Watson seems to think that a Republican administration is entitled to credit for conducting the government on a slightly cheaper basis in time of peace than a Democratic administration did in the greatest war of all history.

Underwood Analyzes the "Protection System."

The iniquities in the schedules of the Fordney-McCumber Tariff bill are the logical results of the Republican protection system of taxation. Senator Underwood, Democratic leader of the Senate, pointed this out as the crux of the whole tariff situation in discussing with Senator McCumber the theory that a tax is placed on raw material there must be a compensatory duty on the manufactured product. Admitting this proposition, Senator Underwood said:

"If you were writing a tariff bill on the protective theory, certainly. That is what I am complaining about. It would not be so if you were writing a bill on the revenue theory. Of course, if you would write it on the revenue theory and proceeded to put a high tax on raw material and a low tax on the finished product you might cause serious injury; but if you were writing it from the standpoint of a revenue duty, you would not be so foolish as to put these unnecessary taxes on at all."

However when you write it from the standpoint of protection you have not only to protect the home manufacturer and producer from foreign competition but you have to protect him against your own legislation, because he will be ruined if you proceed to tax his raw material and do not give him compensation for it. As you admit, of course, that is the theory of protection, and what we protest against is that in order to carry out this theory you have to pile tax after tax on the mass of the American people.

"If you could just wipe the decks clear and forget that you were going to try to build these industries up on stilts and let them come down to a natural competitive basis, this great country could exist and thrive and prosper without this great burden. But under your system you put a tax on the American people primarily for some individual who wants to exploit the people behind a tariff wall."

Taking No Chances.

Two mothers, one with a five-year-old girl and the other with a seven-year-old boy, set out for a walk. For convenience it was suggested that the children walk together and ahead. The boys said: "I will if they won't call."

Chapter XIV

Continued

Full of the tenderest compassion, Pollyop turned swiftly, and at the sight of her flashing, radiant face, Evelyn faintly, toppled forward and rolled almost under the bed.

The squatter girl bounded to her side, her frantic fingers tearing loose the ropes that Larry and Lye Braeger had made secure around Evelyn's body. They fell away, leaving the girl but a little heap on the floor.

Tears streamed over her dark lashes as Pollyop gathered the limp head of Evelyn MacKenzie into her arms. And then she prayed as Granny Hope had taught her to pray. "Our Father which art in heaven," The rest of the petition slipped from her mind, and she quoted with chattering teeth, "The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want."

Her strong arms lifted Evelyn and as she rolled over on the cot, Polly Hopkins stood up and cried: "Underneath Old Marc's woman are your everlasting arms, God dear!"

CHAPTER XVI

"Can you speak to me?"

Pollyop's voice was as tender as when she had repeated heavenly promises to the sad ones of the Silent City and had taught them that love was ever present.

Evelyn gazed at her electrified. The brown eyes were softly luminous. The lips which only a little while ago were strained and blue now were scarlet and fraught with sympathy. What wonderful thing had happened? Pollyop had taken the rope off her feet and hands. She could wriggle a little, although her flesh hurt dreadfully when she tried it.

Prompted by the attempted movement, Pollyop dropped to her knees and began to chafe the injured ankles.

"I'm goin' to give you back to your man," she said, quaking. "But you got to swear to him I swiped you, an' not any squatter men. He'll jail me forever, mebbe, but I don't care about that. I love Larry an' Lye Braeger too much to haul 'em into this."

Then her face fell beside Mrs. MacKenzie's and she wept hysterically. Evelyn's fingers clutched at the chestnut curls.

"Pollyop, oh Polly, darling!"

This was all she could say, for she, too, was weeping even more wildly than the other. In the presence of such divine unselfishness, the pearls of her withered soul seemed to lift and open, as she groped for a broader understanding.

"Granny Hope learned me a lot of things," came up to Evelyn brokenly. "She always said, Granny Hope did, that love was stronger'n hate an' I must just pray your man wouldn't be so wicked to us squatters."

The glistening brown head rolled back and forth in consuming agony. "Don't, Polly darling," Evelyn begged. "Don't, it's all right now. And my husband will—"

Polly sat up, brushing back damp ringlets from her brow.

"He won't do nothin' to help me," she shot out. "Nothin' at all! First, I know him better'n you do. Then next, I wouldn't ask him. Cause—'cause I'm that bad, I ought to be without any Daddy Hopkins an' my Jerry baby." Her voice rose in wild appeal. "But, God dear, how much I want 'em. Oh, how I want 'em!"

The words cut into Evelyn's heart with the keenness of physical pain. Only a little while before she had stood alone at the brink of the grave. There had been no hope that the summer would bring a helpless wee thing to hold her close to Marcus. But now—Her thoughts whirled. So great was her faith in Polly Hopkins that she knew in a little while she would be back in her husband's arms.

The attack of weeping over, Pollyop arose and beat again into pap the hard bread and hot water. This time she took all the sugar left in the cupboard. Daddy would not be home for over two years, and Baby Jerry probably never, and she—she wouldn't be in the shanty long. Groaning, she whipped the spoon so fiercely that some of the contents of the cup splashed on the floor.

"It ain't very toothsome," she said, coming back to the cot; "but the hut's cot, an' you need a lot of warmin' up. I'm goin' now an' get your man. You get this hot pap into your stomach while I'm gone."

Evelyn waved the cup away, holding out a shaking hand.

"I don't want you to go without me, Pollyop," she cried. "Please, don't leave me here alone. I'm terribly scared, I—"

The grave young squatter contemplated her for the space of twenty seconds, perhaps.

"You're afraid of the fishermen, ain't ya, Miss?" she asked. "Well, you've got a right to be! Larry's different from the rest, though he was as willin', up to this night, to chop off your head, as me. But Larry's heart's soft and kind, Larry's is."

"I'm afraid of everybody," gasped Evelyn. "Everybody but you, Polly."

"I'm Afraid of Everybody," Gasped Evelyn.

Please, take me with you, or—or—let me stay till morning."

A slight shake of Pollyop's head brought Evelyn to a sitting position, but pain-racked bones and nerves told her back again.

"There," interjected the other girl. "You can see how hard it'd be to get you through the snow to your ma's house. You'd die before you got there. I'm blest if you wouldn't. No, I got to go alone, Miss."

Noting the fear in Mrs. MacKenzie's eyes, she went over the cot.

"Will you believe something I'm goin' to tell you, Eve?" she said in a wheedling tone.

"Surely I will, Polly," answered Evelyn, wiping her eyes, "but I'm so afraid, so awfully afraid."

"That's no lie," replied Pollyop impetuously, "an' as I said, you got a right to be scared of the squatters. Why, only this afternoon I hated you an' Old Marc as hard as the rest of the Silent City folks—more, mebbe! But—but what I was really goin' to tell you is this. If I lug you along with me, you won't have no baby in the summer. That's God's truth I'm tellin' you, too."

Evelyn lowered her lids, and a painful flush mounted to her hair.

"You're wantin' the little thing, ain't you?" demanded Polly, her voice vibrant with emotion. "Now, be a big woman, an' stay while I'm gone, will you? I'll promise to hustle for all I'm worth."

Mrs. MacKenzie's timid glance ran around the room.

"I suppose so," she whimpered, "but what if some of your people came here?" She shuddered and went on hurriedly. "Polly, what're you going to say to Marcus?"

"I don't know yet," mumbled Pollyop, "but I'll bring him back. Oh, I got it! Say, I'll stick you away in Granny Hope's coop-hole. No squatter'd think to go in there, even if he comes in. Here! I'll help you."

Tenderly she coaxed and begged, but without avail, and patiently Polly sat down on the side of the cot.

"Miss Eve," she took up in low tones, "I'm goin' to tell you something Granny Hope told me. Now, you want to get home to your man, don't you?"

"Yes, yes, oh, so bad, Pollyop," cried Evelyn, "but I can't stay here alone! I can't! I can't!"

She did not think then of the many days and nights the other girl had passed by herself in the same little shack.

"Mebbe it does seem so, Eve," said Polly Hopkins. "But, honey, when I'm done you'll be thinkin' different. Now, listen; don't you know way down in your insides that your man's nearly sufferin' his life away?"

Evelyn burst forth into weeping afresh.

"Of course I know it, Polly," she sobbed, "but—"

"An' you want him to be waitin' all night till daybreak, not knowin' whether you're in the land of the livin' or not, huh?"

This was a solemn question asked by a very solemn-eyed girl.

"Another thing," continued Polly.

"When it comes daybreak, there'll be a lot of squatters about. They come every day to this hut. I'd have to leave you then, wouldn't I? Tonight it's stormin', an' most of 'em are in bed. I could run as fast as a rabbit an' be back in a jiffy. Can't you screw up your courage an' let me go?"

This long statement Evelyn thought over for a few moments. Then:

"Perhaps I could, if—"

"I know you can," interrupted Pollyop. "Now, listen; Granny Hope said anything you want you can have out of love's own heart for the askin'."

"But I'm such a wicked girl," moaned Evelyn dismally.

"So be it," returned Pollyop promptly. "We're both rotten bad, God knows, but never mind all that now. I got to get Old Marc; an' the only way you can help is to stay quiet while I'm out for him. Now, lean on me an' I'll stow you away in the rubbish room till I get back."

Asheamed to make further appeals to the girl who was showing more spirit than she had ever thought possible for any girl to show, Evelyn allowed Pollyop to pick her up and stand her on the floor.

Then the weak leaned on the strong, and when Polly Hopkins tucked the blankets about Evelyn, she whispered: "Granny said prayers in this room all last year an' why on till she died. The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want!" Granny said was one of the best to keep in mind."

She stooped and smoothed back the hair from Evelyn's wet brow.

"Now, while I'm gone you just lay quiet-like, askin' Jesus every minute that your man'll be hikin' here faster'n a crow can fly."

Evelyn raised her head.

"Kiss me, Polly dear," she begged, with streaming eyes.

"All right!" murmured the squatter girl. "Kisses're mighty comfortin', ain't they?"

She stooped and laid her lips on Evelyn's, and turning swiftly, left the room. Evelyn heard her snuffing the candles outside and then heard the latch click as Pollyop closed the door behind her.

Bounding out into the snow, Pollyop raced through the road toward Bishop's hut, for she had decided to speak to him before going on. She lifted the latch and peeped in.

Larry sat by the stove, puffing his pipe. He gave her but a glance then dropped his head mournfully.

"Where's Lye, Larry?" Polly asked in a hissing whisper.

"Gone home," came in a grunt. "He's sick to his stummock, an' so be I. I'm most froze, too."

With her hand on the latch of the door which she had closed against the storm, the girl stood in shivering indecision. She felt intuitively the tender emotions going on inside the stolid speaker. She wanted to throw her arms about him and tell him all that had passed in her home during the last hour. But if she did, Larry would take the blame of the crime on himself. Of course he would! Polly Hopkins knew the heart of Larry Bishop as if she had made it herself from God's own clay. If the person in her shack had been Old Marc, he would have had no compunction in putting him out of the way, but a woman—

"I don't want you for anything to-night, Larry Bishop," she broke out, fumbling with the latch. "An', mind you, dearie, never tell nobody you an' Lye swiped Old Marc's woman. That's a promise, Larry, ain't it?"

"Yep," replied Bishop, nauseated.

"Then go to bed an' sleep," returned Pollyop. "You'll get warm, an'—an'—I'll see you tomorrow—mebbe. I won't be needin' you in my shanty tonight."

Then she went swiftly out, slammed the door and was away like a winter bird, before the squatter could question her.

Swiftly she ran on, her hair almost on end because, to save her friends, she must face the haughty MacKenzie himself. It had been her cruelty that had prompted their act, and now, besides saving Evelyn, she must shield them. The nearer she came to the MacKenzie house, the harder her heart pounded, with dread at the task before her.

In the meantime Marcus MacKenzie and his wife's mother were together, the lady stretched out on the divan, and Marcus pacing the floor. Since MacKenzie had left the Hopkins shack, he had ridden madly over the hills, urging every man available to help him find his wife. Secretly he had wept tears such as never had poured from his eyes before in all his supercilious days.

Having set in motion what aid he could summon from town and country, he had come back home to the hysterical mother. He had no comforting assurances to give her, or any to allay the burning grief within himself. Evelyn had disappeared as if the ground had opened and swallowed her up. He paused in front of Mrs. Robertson, his dark, handsome face working painfully.

"You're very sure she was feeling well just before she went out?" he inquired. "She didn't act as if she had anything to worry over?"

Mrs. Robertson used her handkerchief before she answered.

"I can't think of anything," she hesitated, "unless it was about Bob. Lately he's been so different. I asked Eve one day—"

She broke off and dissolved in tears.

"Yes, you asked her one day—"

what?" MacKenzie urged.

"It was about Bob," continued the weeping lady. "Eve thought he was suffering over—over—"

"Well!" snapped Marcus.

Would the woman never cease her everlasting crying and give him a clue if she had one?

"Well!" he goaded her on more furiously.

"Polly Hopkins!" she sobbed. "Eve said your continual pounding at the squatters had about broken the boy's spirit."

"Rubbish!" exclaimed MacKenzie. "Eve wouldn't waste her time worrying over such rats. Bob's a fool, I've discovered!—Where is he?"

"I don't know," answered Mrs. Robertson. "He goes away for days at a time without saying a word to Eve or me. And he looks perfectly dreadful. I think Evelyn's grieved over him."

"Why didn't you tell me so before?" cried the man, turning on her swiftly. "I'd have soon made my young gentleman put on a smile, at least when he's home. It's a shame my poor wife had to be tormented like that!"

That he had started the rumpus and done his full half of the quarreling never occurred to him. He was determined to find some one to blame for his wife's disappearance.

"Well, there's one thing certain," he ejaculated, after measuring the room several times with long strides. "I can't stay here, but good God! I don't know where to go."

A deep groan fell from his lips, and he began with heavy tread to walk up and down again.

"Can't you think of any place she might have gone?" he begged. "You know all her friends. Where would she go if she had determined to leave home?"

"Leave home?" gasped Mrs. Robertson, her jaw dropping.

"Yes!" faltered Marcus. "I don't know whether she told you or not, but we had some words before I started for Cortland."

"Of course she didn't tell me," came from behind the lady's handkerchief. "She never tells me anything, but I heard it. You were quarreling over the squatters, and in Eve's condition, I think you might spare her a little."

"She's not strong! So much wrangling makes her sick!—I wish Bob were home. Oh, dear, I can't stand it."

"It's Bob that's made all this trouble," snarled Marcus. "He's spent several months trying to circumvent me about the squatters, and Eve and I would have had no quarrels at all if he had attended to his own affairs."

He spoke moodily, conscious that he had treated his wife harshly, yet unwilling to admit it.

Mrs. Robertson, touched with the same feeling, sat up, wiping her face and brushing back her hair. She, too, remembered now all the bitter words she had flung at her daughter.

"Marcus," she said. "If—we—get Eve back again—"

"If we get her!" he interjected, his face going snow-white. "Of course, we'll get her. Why say such ridiculous things?" He turned away to hide the emotion her tremulous question had filled him with. "It will be my death if we don't," he ended.

Mrs. Robertson raised on her elbow.

"But Marcus," she exclaimed, "there's been something on my mind ever since—since— Oh, you don't think the squatters have her, do you?"

"I don't know," moaned Marcus, and he sat down quickly as if his legs would no longer bear the weight of his body.

And they were sitting thus, each busy with his own unspeakable unhappiness, when the servant entered.

"There's a girl here, sir," she began, and Marcus sprang up.

"Bring her in," he cried. "Bring her in instantly!"

The maid hesitated.

"She's queer looking, sir," she said timidly, "and she's wet through. She's one of them squatters."

"Bring her in, I said," ordered Marcus once more, and the girl went out, closing the door softly.

Pollyop crept into the warm room, her teeth chattering, her legs unsteady. Her first glance fell upon Mrs. Robertson who, when she saw her, made a husky throat sound. Then the brown, fearful eyes traveled to the tall man, no longer an enemy to be hated, merely a wounded human creature, like her dear ones in the Silent City, to be loved and comforted.

"I got your woman in my shack," said Pollyop, straight to him, swallowing. "God be thanked," screamed Mrs. Robertson.

Something snapped in MacKenzie's head, and for a moment he feared he was losing his mind. Polly thought by the blank expression of his face that his wits had gone completely. Ignoring the woman whom she detested, she went rapidly to MacKenzie's side.

"I had her roped up in the bed when you was there tonight, mister," she told him, the words tumbling over each other in the haste of confession. "I were goin' to chop her head off to get even with you. But—but—my dead Granny Hope, an' the Biggest Mammy in All the World wouldn't let me."

It seemed an eternity to the quaking young speaker before Marcus threw up his head and took a long breath.

"She—she's alive?" he demanded hoarsely. "You're very sure she isn't dead? Girl," he bounded up and grasped Pollyop's arm, "if you lie to me—"

"I ain't lyin' to you, mister," interrupted Polly dully. "You don't need to be scared for Miss Eve, but now you'd best come along to my hut an' get her. She's mournin' for you in Granny Hope's coop-hole, covered up with blankets."

Something like a huge fist struck MacKenzie. The conviction that the squatter girl's words were true lifted him immediately from the bottom depths of hopelessness. The sudden rush of joyous relief brought with it a mental illumination, and he saw himself as others had seen him. The terrible, blighting uncertainty he had borne for a few maddening hours the girl before him had known for months. If she were to blame for his suffering, what was the measure of his own responsibility?

He turned swiftly to his mother-in-law and said huskily:

"Call some one to get this child some dry clothes. Take anything of Eve's you can find that will keep her warm, and for God's sake, take those ragged boots off her feet!" He sprang to the bell. "I'll order the team."

When he had given his orders to the servant who appeared at the door, he sank back into a chair, and Mrs. Robertson went swiftly out.

Utterly oblivious of the squatter girl's presence, Marcus MacKenzie buried his face in his hands. The new Pollyop, the Polly of the Sun, crept forward and touched him.

"Your woman's all right," she said huskily. "Don't cry! She told me about—about the little kid a-comin' in the summer, an' she howled like mad to come along with me. But I says to her she couldn't walk all this way to you without dyin'."

The soft tones vibrated sympathetically as she voiced the assurances. MacKenzie thrust up his hand and clutched the slim brown fingers.

"Tell me something about it while we're alone," he whispered.

Pollyop shuddered.

"Well, sir," she began, so low that MacKenzie had to raise his head to hear, "all the squatters hate you, but none of 'em was wicked like me. I said, I did, that you couldn't be hurt no way only through your woman, an'—an'—I was goin' to cut her head off with the ax an' then sling 'er in the lake. I s'pose I'm goin' to get sent up for years, but I just had to come and tell you."

Before MacKenzie, aghast at the danger his dear one had faced, could answer, Mrs. Robertson entered, followed by Evelyn's maid.

"I'll get my coat," exclaimed Marcus, jumping up. "Dress the girl warm and send along Evelyn's fur motor coat."

A furtive smile curled the maid's lips as she helped pull off Jeremiah's heavy coat, and then grew broader as Pollyop slipped out of Daddy's great boots. Yet the woman admitted to herself as she dried the wet feet and attired the squatter girl in her mistress' beautiful clothes that she was pretty, even prettier than Mrs. MacKenzie.

When the robing process was finished, Mrs. Robertson glanced over the little figure and grudgingly acknowledged to herself that there was something of elegance in the girl's bearing, even if she were a squatter.

"Come here!" she said. A haughty gesture indicated the spot. "Right here before me."

Polly's shaking legs carried her within a few inches of the august presence.

"You're very sure, girl," asked Mrs. Robertson, "that my daughter's safe in your shack? How did she come there?"

Polly remembered Larry Bishop and Lye Braeger. She had been instrumental in bringing them within the prison shadows, and if any one suffered from the deed done that night, it must not be her friends. She alone must take the blame!

"I wheedled 'er there, ma'am," she replied humbly. "I'm goin' to tell her ma'a all about it."

Marcus entered and started back as he caught sight of Polly. How beautiful she was, bedecked in his wife's clothes! Then it came to him that even in her rags she had had a distinctive loveliness. Both Bob and Evelyn— As that precious name went through his mind, his thoughts flew to the squatter's hut where his frail young wife awaited him.

"Come along quickly," he said, going directly to Polly.

How changed he seemed, how gentle he was as he took hold of her arm and led her away; and so preoccupied was she with this thought that the beauty of the clothes which she wore made no impression upon her. She wondered dully when MacKenzie lifted her bodily into the sleigh and the coachman chirruped to the horses, just what he intended to do with her tomorrow.

She looked back upon the time the authorities had sent Meg Williams to a reform school and also recalled the girl's home-coming after her term had been served. Now that she, herself, was in danger of the like treatment, Pollyop searched her mind for the details that Meg had given of the horrible place.

As the horses trotted along the boulevard, Pollyop's chin sank into the warm fur about her neck, and until they turned into the narrow lane from the road, no one spoke a word.

"Go straight to the lake, Hank," ordered MacKenzie, and at the sound of his deep voice, Pollyop felt another shock of surprise. She had heard it so often in strident abuse. Now it was actually pleasant to listen to!

Down the hill through the furry flakes of snow the strong horses picked their way. Once the cutter nearly turned on its side but righted itself. The Hopkins hut was dark when they reached it.

He Put the Girl Down Before the Door.

drove up before it. Marcus jumped into the snow, picked Polly out of the cutter as if she had been a kitten, and waded through the drift to the narrow path leading into the house.

He put the girl down before the door, and turning, called to the coachman:

"Drive the team down the road, Hank, out of the wind! I'll call you when I want you!"

It was Pollyop's trembling hand that unlatched the shanty door. It was she who struck a match and touched it to the candle. Then she pointed to Granny Hope's room.

"She's in there, mister," she said, trembling like an aspen leaf.

Then because she was about to face an outraged wife in the presence of a powerful husband, she sat down, shaking with fear from head to foot.

Bible Thoughts for This Week

Sunday.

A SUN AND SHIELD:—The Lord God is a sun and shield: the Lord will give grace and glory; no good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly.—Psalm 84: 11.

Monday.

THE PRINCE OF PEACE:—For unto us a child is born; and the government shall be upon his shoulder; and his name shall be called, The Prince of Peace.—Isaiah 9: 6.

Tuesday.

MERCY ASSURED.—He that covereth his sins shall not prosper; but whose confesseth and forsaketh them shall have mercy.—Proverbs 28: 13.

Wednesday.

REWARD OF HUMILITY:—Whosoever exalteth himself shall be abased; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted.—Luke 14: 11.

Thursday.

SAFE STEPS:—The steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord; and he delighteth in his way.—Psalm 37: 23.

Friday.

HOW TO GET ON:—Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find.—Matthew 7: 7.

Saturday.

WITHHOLD NOT GOOD:—Withhold not good from them to whom it is due, when it is in the power of thine hand to do it.—Proverbs 3: 27.

The People's Might.

The feudal system, like other stupendous fabrics of past ages, is known only by the rubbish it has left behind it. Crowned heads have been compelled to submit to the restraints of law, and the people, with that intelligence which makes the voice restless, have been able to say to the prerogative: "Thus far shalt thou come and no farther."—Daniel Webster.

THE COMMUNITY SNOB

Six fork dinners and swill affairs of that sort where everything is punctiliously punk from the soup splashing to the nut grabbing and everybody shut up in expensive clothes with his correspondence school etiquette on his mind, is where the above "gent" and his lady like to shine. They are absolutely pure minded because a thought never enters their heads. They run down to New York, run up to Chicago, run up some bills, run down some people, get a run for their money, run home again and are then all run down for a week. Alton Packard, the cartoonist and humorist, has sketched them true to life. Packard puts the jam on the biscuit every time he draws a cartoon.

Returns From Tour Abroad

COTTON NOE.

DR. NOE returned from a foreign tour just in time to begin his journey over the Redpath Chautauqua circuit. He sailed for Europe March 8 on the White Star liner "Arabia," and while abroad visited Italy, Greece, Switzerland, France, England and Scotland. On the journey over he was associated with such noted voyagers as the English novelist, Philipps Oppenheim; Edna Ferber, American novelist, and the family of the late Horace Dodge, automobile manufacturer. The return voyage was begun May 19 and brought Doctor Noe back to the United States and his native Kentucky in time for a few days' visit with his family at Lexington, before reporting on the Chautauqua circuit.

Dr. Noe, often referred to as "The Mark Twain of Kentucky," is announced for Chautauqua's fifth afternoon, on "The Great American Home." He is a happy combination of poet and lecturer.

GRAINS FOR POULTRY FLOCK

Corn and Wheat Are Best and About Equal in Feeding Value—Scratch Mixture Is Good.

Corn, wheat, oats, and barley are the principal grains fed to poultry; kafir corn and buckwheat are used also, but are not so generally available and usually cost more. Corn and wheat are the two best grains and are about equal in value as poultry feeds, although wheat can be fed alone better than corn, which is inclined to be fattening. Oats and barley, on account of their hulls and higher fiber content, are not so good as corn or wheat. Rye is not well relished by fowls and is seldom fed. Wheat screenings or slightly damaged grains sometimes may be bought to advantage, their value depending entirely upon their quality and condition, but as a rule only sound grains in good condition should be fed to poultry, and moldy grains should never be used. The locally grown grains, which poultry will eat freely, may generally be used to the best advantage, say poultry specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. A scratch mixture, consisting of whole or cracked grains, made of a combination of any two, or more of those mentioned, can be fed to advantage. It is not advisable to feed continuously any single grain, especially corn.

A mash made of ground grains, mill products, and meat scrap should be fed usually in addition to the scratch mixture. Cornmeal, wheat bran, wheat middlings, and meat scrap form the basis of a good mash, while corn chop, corn-and-cob meal, ground oats, and low-grade flour may be added or substituted to advantage. Just as good results can be obtained from a simple mash, containing three or four ground grains and meat scrap, as from a highly complicated mash, containing ten or twelve products.

A large number of commercial mixtures, both of scratch grains and of ground grains, are prepared for poultry feeds, but the value of mixed commercial feed depends upon the composition and the quality of the grains used in its preparation. If a poultry raiser does not produce any grain and keeps a comparatively small number of fowls, it is often better for him to buy commercial mixed feeds. The average farmer, however, should feed home-grown grains, supplemented with mill feeds and meat scrap and the large poultryman usually can mix his own feeds to best advantage. When two or three kinds of grain are raised, and ground or mill feeds are not readily available, good results can be obtained by feeding only the grains, provided they are supplemented with meat scrap or milk.

GRAIN RATION FOR PIGEONS

Good Mixture May Be Made by Using Corn, Wheat, Peas and Vetch—Peanuts Are Good.

Many varieties of grains are used in feeding pigeons. A good mixture may be made of equal parts by weight of small whole corn, hard dry wheat, peas and vetch, with a small quantity (about five per cent each) of hemp and millet seeds added during the molting period.

Other grains which may be substituted for or added to these are peanuts, dried garden peas, cowpeas, clipped oats or hulls oats, buckwheat, Egyptian corn, and milo maize, while a small quantity of state bread rice, rape, millet, (chary or sunflower seed) may be fed for variety.

Peas are expensive, but seem to be essential to the best results, especially during the breeding season. Peanuts, cowpeas and dried garden peas give quite good results and some times are used in place of field peas when the latter are high in price. Soy beans do not seem to be so well liked by pigeons.

Tender green feed such as freshly cut clover, alfalfa and chard lettuce, plantain leaves and chickweed may be fed, but is not essential.

OPPORTUNITY FOR FEW HENS

Whether They Prove Profitable or Not in Back Yard Drover's on Care Given by Owner.

The scattered back yard drover is an opportunity to keep a few hens. Whether the occupant of the premises can keep those few hens to advantage depends upon whether he or she can and will give them the necessary care.

TARIFF IS DELAYED BY EVERY METHOD

DEMOCRATS, KNOWING IT WILL PASS, STILL PUT DRAGS ON SENATE DEBATE

TIME IS WASTED ON TRIFLES

Republicans, Though Not Over Enthusiastic, Want the Measure Enacted as Soon as Possible and Given a Try Out.

By EDWARD B. CLARK

Washington. — Shakespear must have looked three hundred years into the future to visualize the tariff proceedings in the upper house of the American congress in order from the picture to get his fine phrase "damnable iteration."

Now of course the Democrats do not want the tariff bill to pass. It is a Republican measure and they don't like it. They know, however, that it is going to pass, but they do not intend to let it reach the goal until there has been discussion enough to supply several senates with occupation. One is trying to write in an impartial way and in a non-partisan way, and the writer can do this so far as the tariff is concerned, with an entirely good conscience. The Democratic thought seemingly is delay, delay, delay, while the Republican thought seems to be "let us get rid of the infernal thing and give it a chance to try itself out as soon as possible."

The senators sit for twelve hours a day in the tariff court. At least they are supposed to sit there. The sitting, however, is done by half a dozen not at all amiably inclined gentlemen who sit because they must. The others scatter to wait for the sound of the no quorum bell, or for the succession of rings which tells them that they must hurry to vote on something or other which is supposed to make or unmake the country.

It has been discussed before, but the daily record is worth perhaps passing comment. There are 335 of the tariff bill and the senate is now reading and discussing a line some where near the top of the forty-fifth page.

Mica, Micah and Powder Puffs.

Mica has just been under discussion. There are only one or two senators who know anything about mica, but the unknowing know that they must vote as the few knowing ones signal.

There is a story circling round that three or four senators thought mica had something to do with the Old Testament, and that the scheduled subject was a man, not a thing. The matter of a final "h" is nothing to the senatorial mind which fears lest some infant industry is about to be strangled in its croning or crying cradle.

On a hot night two senators gravely discussed mica from the standpoint of, perhaps better, the viewpoint of a woman's powder puff. It was gravely asserted that mica was a necessary because it performed must be the daily accompaniment of the pocket mirror and the other little things which every woman, with a disregard for a right of her natural complexion, carries with her, hot days and cold days.

Two distinguished senators from the northwest portion of this great republic gave up twenty five minutes of more or less precious time a night or two ago to a dispute as to whether or not a certain statement appeared on page 19 or page 21 of a government document. There was no disagreement at all as to the wording of the statement or as to its correctness, but the matter of the page on which it appeared apparently was one of high moment and neither the tariff bill nor the world could go forward until it was made 21 or 21 was made 19 and the change properly had been attested by a notary public with an attending crowd of credible witnesses.

Democratic Delay Effective.

The Democrats, of course, are delaying the passage of the tariff bill because they want the country to believe that the Republican party is slow at the work of legislation. A man may be trying to reach a mark with his heart-in-his-legs efforts, but what progress can he make if pitfalls are dug for him every stride of his running way?

Of course it is charged that the Republicans have wasted a lot of time trying to put through a tariff bill. It is barely possible, of course, that the time spent in putting through this particular tariff bill is all wasted, but the Republican desire seems to be to get the thing through quickly.

The President, so the supposedly well informed say, sits nightly in an upper chamber of the great white mansion and wishes in his heart that the wicked Democrats would let a few schedules go their way to action without objection or obstruction. The President wants to go to Alaska. He probably can go to Alaska only if he chooses to depart for that one-time land of promise when the long night has settled down upon it to hold it in relieved in its embrace until the sun comes back once more.

The tariff, of course, is a most interesting subject if one chooses so to think, but it takes much involving of thought for most laymen here to reach the conclusion that the country is wildly anxious that the Underwood-Simmons bill shall become one day the Fordney-McCumber bill. What the country probably wants, knowing that the change is to come, is that it shall come quickly.

Primitive Patch Near Washington. There is a little stout-roofed, stout-sided, one-roomed cabin on the top of a rocky hill overlooking the Potomac river for many miles from Washington. It is a fine place to go when the senate is discussing the tariff, because the change gives one full opportunity to learn that there is something interesting and beautiful left in this world of ours.

The soil of the island hill on which the cabin stands seemingly is poor, but from it the wild flowers spring readily and the trees rise sturdily, finding foothold and sustenance where both seem impossible. The birds and several species of mammals have claimed the place for their own, but they have shown no resentment of the intrusion of the few persons who on occasion seek out the spot, for the human visitors are kindly disposed toward all forms of the wild life.

You tramp along a smooth highway to reach the base of the hill on which the cabin stands. It is a fine walk, bordered with the things which nature gives to man in the hope that he will show appreciation; and she gives them year after year, nothing discounted by the fact that only one man in fifty gives a nod of recognition for her bounty.

The locusts and the tulip trees, heavy with flowers and almost too heavy with perfume, line a part of the way. Then there are cedars and dogwood and sycamores and plane trees and maples. The redbirds and the mockers and the catbirds and the brown thrashers and the Carolina wrens and the occasional meadow larks, to say nothing of the humbler singers in homespun, find things to their liking by the roadside.

Birds All Along the Way. One traveler along the way who had thought that the bird life of the district was not so abundant as the bird life of other places, found himself in gross ornithological error. Perhaps there was a congregation of the songsters especially assembled to drive home knowledge of the mistake, but, be this as it may, the birds were there in hundreds and every bird had a tune in its throat.

Almost at the outset of the walk along the road a robin's note was heard in a plane tree. Only the casual eye was turned to the robin, for robins and their notes are as plentiful in the District of Columbia as they are in northern Illinois, but it was not a robin, it was a mocking bird which somewhere had caught the "cheer-up" note of our redbreasted friend and was trying it for himself.

He tried it three times and then stopped to begin again, with the unmistakable querulous, half-sneering note that the catbird occasionally throws into the midst of its music. The mocker was dissatisfied, perhaps, with his catbird performance, for he stopped that as he had his robin song, and then refused flatly to sing any more.

The trail from the meadow to the cabin on the hilltop mounts up and up a rocky climbing way, but it is overcast with shade, and there is no lava to forbid resting on every inviting stone that marks the path. The last of the wild flowers just now are blooming. The blue spiderworts are everywhere. The name is not attractive, but the flower is.

Thick Moss and Ancient Trees. The moss grows thick in places, a protective mat for much that seemingly needs no protection, for how can weather hurt a rock or a tree trunk that has stood the shocks of centuries? Some of these trees were here when John Smith sailed up the Potomac in the year of grace 1608. The big trees stand at a distance one from another, and there are little trees and a rather open underbrush in between.

Where the trail starts its mounting, the ground is damp. There were the Canadian warblers with their gold fronts and their necklaces of black beads. With them were the masked Maryland yellowthroats, calling weirdly from the thickets: "Witchety, witchety, witchety." The Maryland yellowthroat is one of the genus of birdland. It is exquisite in its coloring and as exquisite in its manner, and yet this bird for some reason lodged well within its own breast, frequently builds its summer home in the heart of the despoiled skunk cabbage.

From the cabin on the hill one looks off across the country upon a primitive forest. There are trees in it worth while. It is one patch of woodland that has escaped the saw and the ax, and if the temper of its present owner holds, and if the temper of his descendants are as his, it will escape the saw and the ax for long years to come.

Learning Architecture.

Our good friend James Bowe, was telling me the other day the story of the man who lived in a rented house to whom someone gave a dog. Of course the dog had to have a kennel. The man got some old packing boxes and made it himself. He had never built anything before and making this house for a dog dog gave him so much pleasure that he bought a small piece of land on the outskirts of the town and with the help of a local carpenter built a house for himself and family. It is likely that he would be a center today if someone hadn't given him that dog. Most of us are like the old-fashioned automobiles without self-starters. Someone has to crank us before we'll run.—Forbes Magazine.

One Cause of Unhappiness.

Man's unhappiness, as I construe, comes of his greatness; it is because there is an infinite in him, which with all his cunning he cannot quite bury under the finite.—Carlyle.

WE REFER TO THE HOLY BIBLE, DEUTERONOMY, CHAPTER 5, PPS. 19, 20. THESE ARE THE CLOSING PPS. OF THE 10 COMMANDMENTS WHICH ARE ACCEPTED AS COMMON LAW BY ALL CIVILIZATION. NUMBER 19 IS: THOU SHALT NOT STEAL. NUMBER 20, THOU SHALT NOT BEAR FALSE WITNESS AGAINST THY NEIGHBOR. THESE ARE WHAT IS USUALLY CALLED THE 8TH AND 9TH COMMANDMENTS.

To the reader it may appear strange that in business we call attention to these fundamental truths and commandments which society has for many centuries adopted as the basis of civilized life. It is only too true that in the ordinary transactions of business these commandments are so frequently forgotten. The term, thou shalt not steal does not by any means imply a direct taking away of property without the knowledge of the owner, it does not by any means imply only the taking away of property of others by physical force, but it also covers the use made by technical subterfuge which without transgressing the letter of these commandments nor yet the laws of the state based on same still has the effect of a common theft as it transfers from one person who is the legal owner to some other person who can claim no title, without recompensing the legal possessors for their property.

If for instance, the officials of a government, state, city, municipality, men in authority for a brief time and then even the accidents of, probably misplaced public confidence, takes it upon themselves to give valuable property rights to people who have no legal or moral claim to same to the detriment of others who are the real owners having paid for same, paying taxes on same, and held responsible for the proper upkeep of same—If such act is committed by such officials it shows moral turpitude and a perverted sense of right. This is as plainly a transgression of the commandment, "THOU SHALT NOT STEAL," as an act committed by a common pick-pocket who places his hands in your pocket and takes in that manner what is not his own.

Acts are frequently committed by individuals in official capacity which they would be ashamed to do as individuals in their own private business. But honesty is honesty no matter how practiced and dishonesty is dishonesty, whether committed individually or collectively. The 9th commandment "THOU SHALT NOT BEAR FALSE WITNESS AGAINST THY NEIGHBOR," is often transgressed out of spite, prejudice, envy, and frequently also from ignorance. To spread reports which are untrue make such persons fully as amenable to the laws of the state as to the laws of morality. Of all the iniquities of our social system the immoral leper who invents facts purposely to hurt his neighbor, that man who cowardly hides his venom and ill feeling, whose innuendoes, carried by word of mouth, always increase in strength and length, is worse to human society than the ill smelling skunk or the poisonous viper. He may condemn as immoral the highway robber who openly attacks his victim but we still have something to respect—his open bravery, where as to calumniators of social life is a coward and a thief. He steals character, he steals reputation, he steals property rights and all this in such an underhanded manner that no legal process can reach him.

Publicity and aroused public condemnation may be the cure.
